Kevin's Corner

Trashing Your Wallet - The amounts will vary, but grab hold of your wallets because our trash bills are likely going to up significantly. Several factors are going to put the squeeze on your pocketbook: (1) 8.6% inflation is hitting everyone hard, particularly in fuel-intensive businesses like waste disposal; (2) Costs to operate the local landfills are going up and will be passed along. (3) Another significant cost increase hasn't hit us yet, but it's headed our way, and that is a State-mandated requirement that trash haulers require a separate container and processing of "organic" waste from all businesses and homes in California. Early speculation is $3 to $10 more per month depending on the community/city where you reside. For an optimistic view, click on: <https://www.latimes.com/california/story/2021-12-26/organic-waste-composting-law-2022-recycling>, for a pessimistic view: <https://reason.com/2022/04/23/californias-new-food-waste-law-is-backfiring>.

Looking For an Honest "Shady" Non-Profit - The unincorporated community of Mead Valley (located roughly between Perris and Riverside) has been designated as an "Environmental Justice" community because of its overall low-income status and because of its poor air quality (to name a few concerns). As such, the County requires (under State law) contributions to be paid by developers to help fund local community benefits. One of those benefits could be the planting of hundreds, perhaps thousands, of new trees throughout the community. My office is looking for a local area non-profit (or not-for-profit) organization that currently operates or could be involved in the Mead Valley community to work with the County to administer a free residential street-side tree planting program. Any suggestions?

Powering Down - In a "shocking" development, the County recently learned (originally from a private developer) that a local major public utility that provides power service to large portions of our county has identified a specific commercial corridor along the 215 freeway as being significantly constrained and possibly unable to meet high power demands for certain large new commercial warehouses that are being proposed or in some cases already under construction. This limitation (which could last up to 2 years, but they are working on interim fixes) does NOT apply to residential or mom & pop commercial construction. The Press Enterprise has a link to their article here: <https://www.pe.com/2022/04/15/new-warehouses-by-215-freeway-wont-have-enough-power-riverside-county-official-says/> That said, I know that some (maybe even many) of you will be cheering ANYTHING that slows down proposed warehouses and their tractor trailer rigs. Which leads me to the next item...

A Growing Rage – We have a beautiful County that offers diverse settings (mountains, desert, Wine Country, lakes, historic downtown areas, etc.) And while our communities keep growing, unfortunately so does the level of frustration. It really boils down to a quality of life question: How much is enough?!

Quality of life concerns include crime, homelessness, the cost of living (to name just a few) and of course the other big one, our endless gridlock!

Gridlock on our state-owned highways (91, 15 & 215 & Ortega Hwy) is never ending, and Caltrans has mostly been converted away from building freeway capacity and instead into a highway maintenance agency. The gridlock is not confined to our freeways, but also overwhelms many local roads such as Cajalco, Temescal Canyon Rd, Van Buren, Alessandro, Bundy Canyon, and Washington, etc. To make things even more challenging, the State mandates that counties and cities MUST provide for more affordable housing to be constructed. Across our County, we must add 167,351 more houses, including 40,000 in unincorporated/non-city areas. An example of what some cities are required to add: 18,458 in Riverside City, 13,627 in Moreno Valley, 7805 in Perris, 6681 in Lake Elsinore, and 2715 in Wildomar.

During my community meetings the same question is always asked of me. That being: How much is enough? How many more homes (affordable or not) must we add? How many more warehouses, how many more vehicles, how much more water (the biggest water district in Southern California just announced dramatic restrictions on water use)? Will our infrastructure needs ever catch up?

I recently had a respected friend suggest that our county (and cities) need to implement a “pause” in issuing permits until we can get on a path towards resolving our quality of life challenges. He’s not wrong, but the paths (solutions) won’t be easy. I doubt that a “pause” will happen (mainly because of our private property rights), but clearly, we are in trouble and need to rethink – How much is enough?

On that note...

Sincerely,
Kevin Jeffries
